Idaho Governor's Office of Energy Resources

The Idaho Strategic Energy Alliance is now on Twitter!

The Idaho Strategic Energy Alliance (ISEA) has established an account on Twitter to help distribute useful information on energy production, distribution, and consumption in Idaho. The ISEA "Twitter handle," is @ISEA_Idaho.

"Governor Otter formed the ISEA to tap into the vast energy expertise across our state," said Jackie Flowers, executive chair of the ISEA Board of Directors and manager of Idaho Falls Power. "Through the use of Twitter and other communication channels, the ISEA intends to share that expertise broadly with Idaho citizens and businesses who understand the fundamental importance of an affordable, reliable and secure energy supply."

The ISEA will use its Twitter account to help raise energy awareness across Idaho by sharing facts from the 2014 Idaho Energy Primer. The account also will be used to announce new ISEA information products such as task force reports and fact sheets.

About the Idaho Strategic Energy Alliance

The Idaho Governor's Office of Energy Resources (OER) is committed to meeting Idaho's future energy needs in a manner that is affordable, sustainable, and secure in order to support Idaho's vibrant economy. To help assist with these goals, Governor C.L. "Butch" Otter formed the Idaho Strategic Energy Alliance in 2009 within the OER in order to provide information and policy analysis to elected officials, stakeholders, and the public. The ISEA is an effort between the State of Idaho and interested stakeholders to facilitate the discussion of a sound energy portfolio for Idaho. More than 200 Idahoans have volunteered their time to serve on the ISEA Board of Directors or one of its 14 task forces.
